The Rich Man vs. Lazarus

Lazarus, the beggar, is called by his name because he was a saint, but the man who is rich and proud is not deemed worthy of a name. ... The meaning of Lazarus' name is boethoumenos, one who has been helped; he is not a helper, but one who has been helped. He was a poor man and, in his poverty, the Lord came to his assistance. "Who lay at his gate, covered with sores." The rich man, in purple splendor, is not accused of being avaricious, nor of carrying off the property of another, nor of committing adultery, nor, in fact, of any wrongdoing; the evil alone of which he is guilty is pride. Most wretched of men, you see a member of your own body lying there outside at your gate, and have you no compassion? If the precepts of God mean nothing to you, at least take pity on your own plight, and be in fear lest you become such as he. Why do you save what is superfluous to your pleasures? Give in alms to your own member what you waste. I am not telling you to throw away your wealth. What you throw out, the crumbs from your table, offer as alms.

"Who lay at his gate." He was lying at the gate in order to draw attention to the cruelty paid to his body and to prevent the rich man from saying, "I did not notice him; he was in a corner; I could not see him; no one announced him to me." He lay at the gate; you saw him every time you went out and every time you came in. When your throngs of servants and clients were attending you, he lay there full of ulcers. If your eyes disdained to look upon putrid flesh, did not your ears, at least, hear his plea? "Who lay at his gate, covered with sores." He did not have just one sore, his whole body was sores, so that the magnitude of his suffering might arouse your utmost compassion.

What I Want

We live in a world based on convenience. Sometimes, this convenience causes us to have unrealistic expectations in life. We assume that everything is going to be the way that “I” want it and that “I” have a say in everything that I experience, encounter, and participate in.

What’s worse is that so many businesses, schools, hospitals, institutions—even churches—have adapted the customer service model of how things should be handled. People are no longer clients, students/parents, patients, whether physical or spiritual; rather, they are customers, and their satisfaction is the ultimate goal, even if it means being untruthful and misguided in an approach to help them.

You see, it’s all geared toward telling people what they want to hear. If we don’t do this, then they won’t come back. Or worse, they’ll post a bad review online or write a letter to administration. If we approach life like this—if we contribute to it or accept it—then how can we expect people to grow, to learn, to be objective in their thinking, and ultimately, to help themselves?

Our Faith is not something transient or flippant. We have a basis of our faith in Scripture, and the order of services in our Church is designed to reveal and learn Scripture. Yet, there are those who attend services to hear what they want to hear or try to bend Scripture into a meaning that works for them personally and not for the salvation of their souls.

Yes, Christ preached compassion and love. However, He also spoke of the evil of sin, the need for repentance, and the necessity of preparing our souls for judgment. It’s true that we should not be casting stones at others, but when we should always be prepared to help others steer clear of sin or to work through the issues they may be facing in life. We definitely need this ourselves throughout our lives!

In this regard, sometimes the counsel and advice is not something that we want to hear. Confessing and repenting may certainly be something that we don’t want to do. Yet, without these things, we risk eternal damnation of our soul. We are far from perfect beings, and it is important to listen carefully to the Words of our Lord, not to bend the meaning into something we want to hear or that makes us feel comfortable, but to transform and change ourselves to be more like our Savior and to understand the importance of growing in our Faith.
